

The Murder Stone Archive

Funding & Grant Project Brief

Concise summary for potential funders, grant panels, and institutional partners

Mission

Preserve and publish reliable educational records of historic murder stones and their social-historical context.

This brief is intentionally concise; in-depth analysis is provided in the separate Research Pack.

Approved records 13	Locations covered 13	Protected records 10	Chronological range 871–1826
-------------------------------	--------------------------------	--------------------------------	--

Why this project merits funding

- Preserves vulnerable local-history knowledge in a structured public archive.
- Provides free educational access for independent researchers and communities.
- Combines moderation and verification workflows with transparent publication.

Use of funds

- Hosting, uptime resilience, and secure operational infrastructure
- Editorial moderation and quality assurance effort
- Data curation and expansion into underserved geographic areas
- Production of public educational resources (including research outputs)

Deliverables and accountability

- Regularly updated public archive entries and quality-improved records
- Public-facing educational resources and structured research materials
- Impact reporting via usage and engagement analytics

Contact and next step

For grant due diligence, partnerships, or institutional support discussions:
contact@themurderstonearchive.com